Personal Statement

I am a third-year Computer Science student at the University of Greenwich specialising in cybersecurity, with hands-on experience building an intrusion detection system using machine learning classification models as part of my dissertation. Demonstrated ability to manage competing priorities and collaborate effectively, developed through two years of customer-facing roles alongside full-time study. Bilingual in Arabic and English, with a proven track record of clear communication under pressure. Eager to contribute to a security-focused team where I can apply my practical experience in threat detection and continue developing expertise in network defence.
